

I claim:

1. A device for obtaining a sample from a body cavity, comprising:

(a) a plurality of elongated flexible bristles of approximately uniform length connected to a handle to form a mop-like sample collecting member, said bristles being disposed in a direction substantially parallel to the axis of the handle.